THE WORD

Word got around when Jesus returned to Capernaum from preaching in the towns of Galilee. They filled the house, probably Simon Peter’s, and He preached to them. His message Mark told us early on: Now is the time of fulfillment; the kingdom of God is at hand (see Mark 1:15). To participate in the reign of God one had to repent of one’s sins and believe in the good news of a forgiving God.

Jesus’ agenda had to do with bringing people into the kingdom by calling them to repentance. This was His purpose, in fidelity to His Father’s will. So when a paralyzed man was lowered through the roof, Jesus’ response to the faith He saw exhibited was to announce, “Child, your sins are forgiven” (2:5). The passive voice indicates that God is at work here. Jesus is announcing the forgiveness of the God of Isaiah, who is doing something new through Him.

Forgiveness may have come first in Jesus’ mind, but what the scribes heard was blasphemy. To forgive sins was the prerogative of God. No human could lay claim to this or assume the authority to do it. Nothing is said, but the heart can communicate without words both love and hatred.

Jesus’ response is to confront these scribes and then turn to the man to say, “pick up your mat and go home” (2:11). The healing came after the forgiving. For Jesus, forgiveness comes first, for it effects the deepest healing. Through forgiveness a new world can come about, for in forgiving God touches and transforms human hearts. Forgiveness heals.
